The HurriChill Process

To limit the danger of bacterial contamination in food, it is extremely important to lower its temperature rapidly, thereby reducing the time spent in the danger zone (140°F to 40°F).

The blast chiller allows the product core temperature to be reduced from 160°F to 38°F in 90 minutes, so that the food can be kept longer with its original texture, flavor and aesthetic qualities.

By using a HurriChill™ shock freezer, it is possible to bring the food temperature to 0°F within 240 minutes. Shock freezing is the only system that allows food products to be preserved for weeks or even months, keeping the initial quality almost intact. Product will not have weight and color loss plus the texture and flavor remain unchanged.

Powerful performance in a cool little package.
